

LILIA ARELY PRADO

Lilia Arely Prado Barragan, PhD., is a full professor on the Autonomous Metropolitan University (Mexico) in the area of Biological and Health Sciences (Biotechnology Department - Solid State Fermentation). She is Member of the National Research Mexican System (Level II). Referee of the Science and Technology Mexican Consul, member of the Biotechnology Postgrad Board and coordinator of the Editorial Committee of Text Books for Biological Sciences. Affiliated to the Mexican Society of Biotechnology and Bioengineering (SMBB), Mexican Association of Food Science (AMECA). Expert in production of microbial metabolites by solid state fermentation and a wide experience in isolation, selection and identification of strains with biotechnological potential. Holds 30 international publications and books chapters. Has graduated 25 BSc, 8 MSc and 6 PhD students. Her research interests are microbial enzymes, natural antimicrobial molecules, natural antioxidant molecules and the valorization of by-products from the agro alimentary industry. She has a particular interest on the non-residues biological processes.

